HARD FIGHTING IN REICH

Russians Mass Forces For Further Blows—Japs Pasted At Manila

By International News Service

American troops of Lieut. Gen. George Patton's Third Army launched a new attack at dawn today on the Western front. The thrust was aimed between Metz and Nancy.

Yanks of the 12th Army Corps spanned the Seille river and quickly captured four towns. Dispatches from the front indicated the new drive is being maintained.

A two-hour artillery bombardment of German positions preceded the push. Ground troops then began their advance, slogging through the sluch and mud caused by inclement weather.

General Patton's men pressed forward an average of one mile along the entire front. They crossed the Seille at several points in the area of Rouves, about 13 miles south of Metz.

Enemy opposition varied. Pockets of medium resistance battled against the American push at some points. Only sporadic counter-fire was encountered at others.

Heavy Fighting

Inside Germany, still heavier fighting prevailed. Units of the American First Army were embroiled in street fighting for the embattled town of Vossenack, 13 miles southeast of Aachen. Fighter-bombers blasted parts of the town occupied by the Nazis. Some areas of the town were aflame.

Other troops of Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' First Army pressed against the German village of Schmidt, south of Vossenack. They repulsed two enemy counter-attacks.

The Germans employed mass artillery fire to stem the First Army's advance, hoping thereby to prevent an American breakthrough to the plains before Cologne. Heavy fighting raged throughout the Hurtgen forest area near the towns of Vossenack and Schmidt.

Northward on the Western front, Allied troops mopped up remnants of Nazi resistance in Southwestern Holland. To the south, the Sixth Army group, comprised of American and French armies, eked out new gains in Eastern France.

Russ Mass Forces

On the eastern front, Russia massed its forces for renewed offensive blows. Soviet artillery shelled the Hungarian capital of

Lausche Takes Lead As Roosevelt Whittles At Dewey's Small Margin

BULLETIN

At 12:30 p. m. Wednesday William Garfield Stewart conceded election of Frank J. Lausche as governor of Ohio.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 8—An avalanche of CIO-PAC-inspired Democratic votes today apparently swept Mayor Frank J. Lausche of Cleveland into the governor's chair and threatened to make a nearly-clean sweep of the statehouse and the U. S. senate seat of Robert A. Taft as well.

Lausche built up his margin over Republican James Garfield Stewart, mayor of Cincinnati, in such PAC strongholds as Akron and Youngstown as well as in his own Cuyahoga county. While some counties remained in doubt, Stewart was assured of carrying at least 62 of the 88 counties—but he lost the heavily-populated areas and with them the election.

Moves Into Lead

FRANK J. Lausche, of Cleveland, who moved into the lead in Ohio's gubernatorial race as a big favorable vote continued to pour in from industrial districts of Ohio. Cuyahoga county in which Cleveland is situated proved the deciding factor in favor of the Democratic candidate.

Lausche led Stewart by a 50,000-vote margin on the basis of unofficial returns from 8,680 of the state's 9,603 polling places in the state.

Roosevelt Gains

Governor Dewey's margin over President Roosevelt was being whittled by returns from industrial areas of the state.

In the presidential race, 8,178 of the state's 9,306 polling places gave Dewey a 33,444-vote lead.

Most of the missing precincts were from areas which were giving both Roosevelt and Lausche majorities. Returns from industrial section of the state were especially slow.

Taft Lead Slight

Taft was maintaining a slight margin over William G. Pickerel, former Lieutenant governor from Dayton, but he also was feeling the strength of the PAC and was by no means a certainty to be re-elected—although pre-election odds favored him by odds up to five-to-one.

Stewart, in traditional Republican fashion, ran very well in the rural counties, even capturing by a bare 16 votes Holmes county, one of the two counties that went Democratic two years ago when Governor Bricker won a third term as the state's chief executive.

Belmont county, which again went Democratic, saved its reputation as a county which has never voted for a losing presidential candidate.

Ross county had a similar reputation, but an apparent Dewey majority there shattered that long-standing tradition.

Cleveland Big Factor

Cuyahoga county was expected to turn in a majority in excess of 200,000 for Lausche, while Mahoning county (Youngstown) was approaching a plurality of nearly 40,000 for the Democratic nominee and Summit county (Akron) about 35,000.

Stewart's own Hamilton county, meanwhile, was the biggest disappointment of the Republican cause, turning in a majority that may not reach even 40,000 while pre-election GOP strategists talked 70,000 to 90,000.

With Cuyahoga, Summit and Mahoning counties still pouring in huge Democratic majorities, it appeared probable that a majority of the state ticket candidates would overcome rural leads piled up by the Republicans and forge ahead in final returns.

SPECIAL LEVIES PASS IN COUNTY

Agriculture, Circleville School Issues Given Big Margins

All the special levies voted on by Pickaway county residents Tuesday passed by good majorities.

The agricultural levy, the only issue which was county-wide passed by a 2-1 margin the total vote being 5871 for the levy and 2903 against the levy.

Circleville voters renewed the city school district three-mill levy. The issue passed in every precinct the final unofficial vote being 2313 for and 498 against.

Deercreek school levy received 259 votes for and 130 against; Darby school levy received 182 for and 103 against; New Holland favored its school levy 227 to 53; Saltcreek passed its levy 148 to 85.

The agricultural levy was put up to the voters when inadequacy of housing facilities for the annual Junior Fair became increasingly evident. The voters were asked to provide sufficient money to erect a field house for county athletic events, public gatherings and for Fair exhibition purposes along with other buildings for the handling of livestock at the fair. The levy is for one year only and will provide approximately $49,000.

Last week the Pickaway County Agricultural Society bought the old fairgrounds site and the new county buildings will be erected there.

Exact nature of the field house has not been determined, but considerable sentiment favors a structure that will handle county basketball games and which may be used also for the display of livestock. The county basketball tournaments will be staged at the

BALLOTING IS CONFUSED

Sheriff Radcliff Again Gets Largest Vote With Colville Second

Three new faces will be seen around the Pickaway county court house after January 1, 1945, but none of the present office holders were defeated in the Tuesday general election.

Elected without opposition were Kenneth M. Robbins, Republican, as prosecuting attorney; George R. Gardner, Republican, county coroner, and Sterling Lamb, probate judge.

Mr. Robbins succeeds George Gerhardt who did not seek re-election. Attorney Lamb will succeed Lemuel B. Weldon, present judge, who did not run again. There is no coroner in the county at the present time.

Re-elected to county posts were County Commissioners Wayne A. Hoover and John B. Keller; Clerk of Courts, Arthur L. Wilder; Sheriff Charles Radcliff; County Recorder Florence T. Campbell; County Treasurer Robert G. Colville; County Engineer Henry T. McCrady, all Democrats.

County election table by precincts on page 3.

Dewey Wins County

Gov. Dewey carried the county by a margin of 650 votes with a total of 5,997 to 5,347 for Roosevelt. James Garfield Stewart ran slightly behind Dewey's total, and Frank Lausche, the Democratic candidate for governor picked up a few votes over the President. The total was Stewart 5,815, Lausche 5,391. At this point the scratching of tickets began in earnest and Democratic candidates for state and legislative offices gained while Republicans took big cuts. The first switches from the Republican victory column was for Ferguson who defeated Tracy for auditor of state and Hurley who defeated Jenkins by a very slight margin in the attorney general race.

The voting jumped back in the Republican column when Taft scored county victory over Pickrel in the U. S. senate race, Bender defeated Glass for representative at large, Brehm won from Underwood. Addison and Walcutt downed Holmes and Reed for state senator posts, Louis swamped Schieser for state represetnative.

Big Change Comes

At this point came the big change and Hoover and Keller won the commissioner races from their Republican opponents, Wright and Roese, Wilder retained his post as clerk of courts, defeating Brinker, and Robert Colville defeated Fausnaugh (R) for treasurer.

Commissioner Race

In the commissioners race Incumbent Wayne A. Hoover and Edward Wright, former Republican commissioner, led early, but John B. Keller edged out Wright.

Final unofficial count gave Wright 5,361; Hoover, 5,972; Roese, 5,079; Keller, 5,452.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—General Tomoyuki Yamashita, 59, conqueror of Malaya and leader of Nippon's 1942 victory march on Bataan and Corregidor, today commands Japanese forces in the Philippines, according to a Domei agency dispatch reported by the FCC.

Yamashita apparently succeeded Lieut. Gen. Shigenori Kuroda, but the over-all command remains in the hands of Field Marshal Count Juichi Terauchi.

Japan's war ministry, according to Domei, simultaneously announced that Nipponese army air forces in the Philippines are under command of Lieut. Gen. Yasuji Tominaga.

'SCREWY' VOTING STOPS EXPERTS

Democrat Elected On GOP Ticket; Scratched Ballots Numerous

"Screwey" is the way many political observers described the Pickaway county election.

Several unusual events bore out this contention.

Dr. George R. Gardner, who has been a Democrat all his life, was elected coroner on the Republican ticket. His name was written on the ballot in the primary by friends as a joke and since there was no other candidate he was elected. He received 5,607 votes.

The county gave James Garfield Stewart a big majority for governor, but voters jumped back and forth for other state offices. Democrats on the state ticket who received a plurality in the county were Auditor Joseph Ferguson and George A. Hurley, candidate for attorney general.

Leading the county and state ticket was a Democrat, Sheriff Charles Radcliff who received 6508 votes in his unopposed bid for his fifth term as sheriff.

To keep the confusion going the rural areas voted heavily for Dewey while every precinct in the city gave Roosevelt a majority.

CLARE BOOTH LUCE WINS BY 1,500 VOTE MARGIN

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 8—Clare Boothe Luce, Republican glamour gal and one of the New Deal's most caustic critics, today was ready to continue her stormy career in congress.

Mrs. Luce won Connecticut's embattled Fourth district race by a margin of some 1,500 votes over her feminine Democratic opponent, Margaret E. Connors.

WANAMAKER IS COUNTY CHIEF JUSTICE CHOICE

Pickaway county voters balloted with the rest of the state on the judicial ticket at the Tuesday election.

Total vote in Pickaway county showed a vote of 3223 for Walter B. Wanamaker and 3075 for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Carl V. Weygandt. Early returns showed Weygandt trailing Wanamaker over the state.

The rest of the supreme court vote was as follows in Pickaway county: Hubbell 1975; Mathias, 3913; Duffy 2891; Hart, 3142.

Judge Russell McCurdy of the sixth district court of appeals received 4359 votes in the county. He was unopposed.

Sterling Lamb received 5092 votes for probate judge.

Both amendments to the state constitution passed in the county. Unofficial totals were 3394 for and 2046 against the proposed amendment to section 2, article 4, and 2880 for and 2078 against the amendment to section 6, article 4.

DEMS TIGHTEN GRIP ON HOUSE

Greatest Strength Since 1940 May Be Assured By Final Figures

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—The oft-times shaky grip of the Democratic administration on the house of representatives was tightened for another two years today by incomplete election returns which showed at least 205 Democrats to 138 Republicans elected for the 79th Congress.

The prospect of certain Democratic house control was emphasized when, with only 92 districts in doubt, 22 Democratic incumbents seeking re-election were yet to be heard from.

The candidates who were swept along on the Roosevelt landslide had only to hold these outstanding seats to come up with a working house membership of 227 congressmen—their greatest strength since 1940.

HILLMAN PLEASED, SAYS PAC TO REMAIN ACTIVE

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, declared today that the American people had reaffirmed faith in "a great American" by re-electing President Roosevelt and added that the PAC will continue its activities.

In a prepared statement, Hillman said:

"The American people have given President Roosevelt a mandate to continue the course he has charted for victory in the war, for an enduring peace and for jobs and security for our people."

DEWEY LEADS IN ONLY DOZEN OF 48 STATES

President's Margin May Even Surpass Defeat Of Wendell Willkie

ISSUE DECIDED IN CITIES

America Gives Mandate To Win Global Wars And Secure Future Peace

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—President Roosevelt held a fourth term mandate from the American people today to win the global wars, bring our armed services home promptly and to secure the future peace of the world.

Mr. Roosevelt was overwhelmingly reelected to another term in the White House in a smashing victory over Governor Thomas E. Dewey that was mounting hourly and may even surpass his 1940 defeat of Wendell Willkie. The President either carried or led in 36 states, with an electoral vote of 430.

Governor Dewey lagged far behind, carrying or leading in only 12 states, having 101 electoral votes. Dewey may even lose three more states. These are Indiana, where his lead was cut to 14,000. In Ohio where he was ahead by 53,000 and in Wisconsin, where he was out in front by 16,000.

May Increase Margin

The President may well win 39 states having 480 electoral votes, leaving Dewey with nine states with 51 electoral votes. If he does, it will surpass his victory over Willkie, who carried ten states with 82 electoral votes, and even his slaughter of Former President Hoover, who carried only six states with 59 electoral votes in 1932.

It was a decisive victory as fully 50,000,000 citizens voted. Dewey, though badly beaten in the electoral college, ran well in popular votes. He should get close to 23,000,000 votes against Roosevelt's 27,000,000 as the President carried many states by quite small margins. Roosevelt's biggest triumph was in New York state, which he won by 325,000.

Dewey conceded his defeat graciously in a little speech to newsmen at his Hotel Roosevelt headquarters at 3:14 a. m. EWT, which was broadcast. The President heard the broadcast and telegraphed his thanks to the governor.

Furious Campaign

Although the campaign was waged furiously and the rival nominees hurled bitter charges at each other at times, it ended on a solemn note of unity. It was Dewey who called for this unity and he invoked Divine aid to guide and protect the President in his efforts to win the global war and secure peace for future generations.

After asserting that "every good citizen will accept the will of the people" and expressing hope that "the President's term will lead to victory, to the establishment of a lasting peace and a return to tranquility," Dewey added:

"I am confident that all Americans join me in the hope that in the years ahead, Divine providence will guide and protect the President of the United States."

The President heard the broadcasted message and telegraphed Dewey in reply:

"I thank you for your statement which I heard over the radio a few minutes ago."

Personal Message

Dewey had used the radio to give his message to the American people, rather than sending a formal telegram to the President, because he had been informed that Mr. Roosevelt had retired earlier for the night.

A little later, Governor John M. Bricker, of Ohio, the GOP vice presidential nominee, declared:

"I join in the sentiment expressed by Governor Dewey. I have done all within my ability to carry the issues as I saw them to the American people. They have spoken. I congratulate the winners and shall do all I can to aid in the war effort and in making our country stronger and better."

The vice-president-elect, from Kansas City, promptly issued a statement, declaring:

"It was a grand statement by Governor Dewey and it shows was reelected with a comfortable margin over J. W. Schieser, Democrat. The vote was 5690 to 5079.

Earl C. Reed of Ashville failed to oust Roscoe R. Walcutt of Columbus for state senator. In the county Reed polled 5430 votes to 5245 for Walcutt. Walcutt carried Franklin county.

Incumbent Evert E. Addison received 5443 votes in the county to 5209 for Franklin H. Holmes, Democrat.

Robbins received 5659 votes for prosecuting attorney. Sterling Lamb was elected probate judge with 5092. George R. Gardner was elected coroner on the Republican ticket with 5,607.

Wilder Wins

Mr. Wilder went back into office with a margin of 683 votes over Wilbur E. Brinker, Republican candidate. Wilder collected 5,831 votes to 5,138 for Brinker.

Treasurer Colville polled 6,211 votes to keep his office. He received more votes than any candidate on the national, state or county tickets who was opposed. His Republican opponent, Emma Hudson Fausnaugh, had 4,951.

Sheriff Radcliff received the largest vote of any one candidate, polling 6,508 in his unopposed bid to keep his position.

Engineer Henry McCrady ranked third in the total vote with 6,210, one less than Colville who stood second. McCrady was unopposed.

Dr. Gardner collected 5,607 votes for coroner.

Fewer county residents voted for president Tuesday than voted in 1940. The total for this election was 11,344 as compared with 12,869 in 1940. This was a surprise to observers who believed that the county would cast the heaviest vote on record. Voting was extremely heavy in the early hours, but slowed up in the afternoon.

Roosevelt carried every precinct in Circleville and won over Dewey by a margin of 444 votes in the city. The unofficial figures were Roosevelt 2,161 to 1,717 for Dewey. The big switch was in the rural districts.

Counting of the presidential ballots was much faster than officials had anticipated. Twenty precincts had reported by 7:40 when tabulators reported that the count then stood at 2,660 for Dewey and 2,289 for Roosevelt.

Counting Slow

Tallying of the combined state and county ticket was much slower as 37 separate entries had to be made as compared with only two in registering the presidential vote.

It was at 8:05 that the second tabulation, this time for 30 precincts, was announced. Dewey widened his gain to 750 in this count, but returns from city figures later cut down this lead.

Ten minutes later Darbyville sent in first figures in the county on the state and local elections. The vote in that precinct was far lighter than in 1940 and the switch was from an almost even division four years ago to a wide Republican margin. In 1940 Roosevelt, Willkie, Bricker and Davey each received 61 votes. This election Dewey headed Roosevelt 64 to 38 and Stewart was ahead of Lausche 63 to 35.

First report on the agricultural levy came from Circleville township where the issue carried by a count of 140 to 37.

The 20 precinct totals showed Stewart leading Lausche by 350, Taft was ahead of Pickrel by 250, Brehm and Underwood were neck and neck with the incumbent receiving 2,335 votes to Underwood's 2,313. Hoover and Wright were leading in the commissioner race, Wilder was ahead for clerk of courts by a margin of fewer than 100 and Colville was ahead of Fausnaugh by a count of 2,478 to 2,162.

When the 30 precinct totals were announced Stewart was ahead of Lausche 4,031 to 3,367, Taft was 500 ahead of Pickrel, Brehm was ahead of Underwood by 200 votes, Wright had moved into the lead for commissioner with Hoover in second place, Roese in third and Keller in fourth. Brinker and Wilder were separated by 31 votes in their race for clerk of courts with Wilder in the lead, and Colville was leading Fausnaugh by 400 in the race for treasurer.

American sportsmanship. It is up to the people to make good the Dewey statement by winning both the war and the peace."

Nation Behind FDR

The outcome of the election showed the world that the American people are behind Mr. Roosevelt in his conduct of the war and in his plans to disarm both Germany and Japan for peace in the future. It was an overwhelming decision in the electoral college, although Dewey ran strongly in all sections of the country, carried the farm belt and many rural-small town sections of the East. The President won though by sweeping the great cities.

There was little doubt but that the CIO's Political Action Committee, headed by Sidney Hillman, had a lot to do with the verdict.

The Hillman followers first got out a tremendous registration of voters in industrial areas clear across the nation. Then—yesterday—they got these same voters to the polls and most of the voters supported Roosevelt. In many eastern states, it was noticeable that the regular Democrat organizations were inactive and that Hillmanites were leading the Roosevelt forces.

Cities Decide

It was in the great cities that Roosevelt rolled up his margin of victory. He carried New York state by rolling up 736,000 plurality in New York City, while Dewey's upstate lead slashed by defections in large industrial cities. In state after state, he carried the big cities, and the Republican pluralities in small cities, towns and farm areas just were not enough to give Dewey victory.

The outcome was forecast by some rabid New Dealers and it did not surprise many neutral observers, who believed the result would be a landslide one way or the other. This was due to the fact that millions of citizens refused to participate in polls and constitute a great bloc of "silent voters." These "silent voters" apparently supported Roosevelt en masse and the president remained "the champion."

Dewey was threatened with loss of New Jersey, where his early lead was whittled down hour after hour. It may take some time to determine the final result in that state. Meanwhile, Dewey had a small chance of overtaking Roosevelt in Pennsylvania, where the President piled up large maporities President piled up large majorities

The President will get a Democratic house and a Democratic senate but it may not be fully New Deal. It is still entirely possible that a coalition of Southern anti-New Deal Democrats will combine with the Republican minorities to exert a greater influence over the conduct of domestic affairs and even in the international field. It is too early to determine whether Roosevelt's great electoral college victory has given him a free hand in Washington for the next four years.

FDR MAY GAIN 55 PERCENT OF POPULAR VOTE

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—Best estimates of President Roosevelt's total popular vote indicated today that final returns may show that he received as high as 55 per cent of the ballots cast.

This compares with forecasts made by nation-wide polls as follows: The Gallup poll gave Roosevelt 51.5 per cent, the Fortune poll 53.6 percent and the Crossley poll 52 percent. Only Emil Hurja put the majority on the wrong side of the ledger, giving Dewey 52 percent of the total and Roosevelt 43 percent.

tabulations, disclosed that the tide on seat-capturing was running with the Democrats. The Roosevelt-supporting and Roosevelt-aided candidates had made off with at least 18 Republican seats as against only two of their own captured by the GOP.

Budapest. German reports indicated the Red Army already has struck in a move to outflank the city.

Indications were that Nazis on the home front also were on the receiving end of the war. The Federal Communications Commission reported that radio stations at Hamburg, Frankfurt and Cologne went off the air this morning. The Frankfurt radio warned that "enemy aircraft" were approaching.

On the Italian front, Eighth Army Polish troops won a fierce fight and the important Mount Casalda, between the Rabbi and Montone rivers, south of Forli.

Japs Staggered

In the Philippines, Japan staggered under new attacks. Admiral William F. Halsey's Third Fleet carrier planes destroyed 249 enemy aircraft in the Manila area, sank five more Japanese ships and damaged ground installations.

General Douglas MacArthur reported three Japanese counter-attacks in the Ormoc area of Leyte island were thwarted by the American 24th division. Heavy losses were inflicted upon the enemy, he said.

The Japanese claimed destruction of 45 American aircraft in raids on Leyte. The enemy claim was unsubstantiated by American authorities.

Japan also anounced the presence of a familiar figure in the Philippines. He is 59-year-old General Tomoyuki Yamashita, the man who conquered Malaya and led Nippon's troops to temporary triumph on Bataan and Corregidor. Yamashita succeeded Lieut. Gen. Shigenori Kuroda. The change indicated the possibility of dissatisfaction by the Nipponese high command. Over-all charge of the enemy's Philippines forces remained in the hands of Field Marshal Count Juichi Terauchi.

HANNEGAN SAYS VICTORY OF FDR ASSURES UNITY

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan in a statement issued at Democratic national headquarters, said:

"The overwhelming victory of President Roosevelt means—permanent peace.

"The citizens of this country have shown that they are overwhelmingly of one mind—to get on with the war, win it, plan for the peace, win the peace and at the same time go forward with the program that will secure jobs for our people, including returning veterans.

"We Democrats are gratified of course by the results but from the beginning we have looked on this election as a contest transcending party. The stakes were bigger than those of partisan politics. They were the fulfillment of America's hope and America's destiny in the years ahead of us.

"While our men must go on fighting overseas, we cannot feel in any mood to congratulate ourselves.

"All of us will concentrate in supporting our fighting men and the government of the nation they are fighting for and for the kind of America that the future can hold for us all."

field house that will have a seating capacity of 2,500 or more. Maintenance will be provided by the county.

The school levy for three mills has been in effect locally for fifteen years and the money it provides is a substantial share of funds needed by local educational institutions. Without the levy educators had announced that the school program would have to be cut as the institutions already are operating close to the financial danger mark.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

troubles in China were chiefly responsible for his failure to make progress in Burma.

Davies did not paint a very happy picture. His official report said: "Unless steps are soon taken to provide for a prompt and orderly relinquishment of British rule in favor of an Indian national government, we run the risk of facing in our time chaos in India, which may provide the fuel for another great war."

REPORT CRITICIZES BRITISH

It is now known that General Stilwell had a lot of squabbles with Lord Mountbatten, but the real story of his troubles because of the Indian political set-up has only been hinted at. Davies, reporting on this, said:

"The underlying unrest, hatred of the British and sympathy for the enemy are productive of the most unsatisfactory situation from the military point of view. Bad as these conditions are, they are no worse than, if as bad as, those which confronted the Japanese 'Army in Manchuria when, using 'Manchukuo' as a base, it carried on operations against North China.

"India is a problem," Davies continued, "which no longer can be ignored by us and other members of the United Nations.

"The British, of course, protest against any suggestion that they deliberately seek to use any one faction or community against the other. They have played the Indian colonial game so long that, as they acquired their Empire through fits of absent-mindedness, so now they practice a policy of divide and rule almost unconsciously."

Davies also shed revealing light on the famous mission of Sir Stafford Cripps and Col. Louis Johnson, former U. S. Assistant Secretary of War, to try to work out a compromise in India. Davies substantiated previous reports that the mission was sabotaged by British Indian interests.

"British officials maintained that the Cripp proposals demonstrated good faith," Davies informed General Stilwell. "But when it seemed an agreement was imminent, Cripps was overruled and succumbed to the imperialists who now control the British Government."

So India is our own problem," Davies said, near the end of his long report. "What happens now and later in India affects us. It is therefore of very great concern to us whether Britain attempts to perpetuate its domination over 350 million Indians, who may be expected to draw the sympathy of the Soviet or China, or both."

Those were some of the things Stilwell bucked up against.

BELGIAN ART REAPPEARS

BRUSSELS — Thousands of famous paintings, expensive carpets, antiques and priceless carvings are coming out of hiding. Belgians buried them in their gardens or carted them into the country and hid them when the Germans came in. The Germans burned Louvain University Library for the second time in 25 years. Of 900,000 books only 15,000 were saved. Of 800 precious manuscripts 15 alone remain.

CAN'T CASH IN NOW

NEW YORK—James Sullivan, 17, discovered a roll of bills under a truck but he didn't know the value of the money until police did a little research. The roll was in Netherlands East Indies guilders, one 5,000 guilder note and five 1,000 guilder notes. A book value of 53 cents a guilder made the bills worth $5,300, but at the moment the Japs hold the Indies and no market for the currency exists.

PAY RENT WITH ROSE

MANHEIM, Pa. — The yearly rent of the Zion Lutheran Church was paid with one red rose. The custom was established in 1772 by Baron William Henry Stiegel, a colonial glass manufacturer, who deeded the plot and stipulated the rental.

MILITARY TIME CLOCK

AMONG the many things distinguishing this war from all previous wars is Uncle Sam's bold undertaking to operate on schedule. Formerly the commanding generals doubtless aimed to arrive at a certain place or state of accomplishment about a certain time, but there wasn't so much system about it, and expectations were less definite. Now it seems to be common procedure for a commander to plan everything not only for the main strategy, but down to the last detail of operation, including a time-table. Everything is expected to be done by clockwork. So many men, in such and such a force, ordered to proceed to a certain area and execute a definite operation at a definite time.

Americans, who are the greatest clock-watchers in the world, with a natural liking for accurate and orderly procedure, take readily to this procedure. The only trouble is that they tend to get over-enthusiastic, and may reach their objectives in less time than has been assigned for them. But this is a fault easily forgiven.

NO VOTING IN ENGLAND

IN England no one under 30 has ever voted for Parliament. As Prime Minister Churchill has just reminded the House of Commons, no general election has been held since 1935. There have been special elections to fill vacancies in individual districts. However, as registration for new voters has been suspended for the duration, no one coming of age in the last nine years can get his name on the list.

There will be no election for at least another year. Parliament will extend its term of office, as it has done annually ever since the war started. The British are too busy fighting to take time off for a political campaign.

Soon after the war there will be an election. With 10 years or more of accumulated new voters to confound the prophets, the election results may well be surprising.

DO YOU PLAY CHESS?

WIN the war by playing chess or checkers. A call has come from a veterans' hospital for volunteers to amuse convalescent soldiers by playing their favorite game. All over the country, wherever there are veterans' hospitals, the same opportunity must exist. Nor is there any reason why this act of kindness should be limited to sick veterans.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

GLASS FAMILY FEUD OVER FDR

WASHINGTON—One of the hush-hush family feuds of the Senate flared unblushingly into the open during the closing days of the campaign when Powell Glass, son of the venerable 86-year-old Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, in effect called Justice Byrnes a liar and said his father was not for the fourth term. The White House previously had said that Senator Glass had telephoned Byrnes to congratulate him on his speech and to say he, Glass, was supporting the fourth term.

Unwittingly in the center of this family feud is the second Mrs. Glass, a modest Virginia school teacher, formerly Mrs. Mary Scott Meade, who married the Senator in 1940 when he was 82 years old and who is very much for Roosevelt.

The Glass sons, on the other hand, are very anti-Roosevelt and also very anti the second marriage of their father. And the cleavage has become deeper and deeper as Mrs. Glass has turned out more and more a New Dealer. Ill and old, the Senator seldom goes out but frequently he is paired in the Senate in favor of Roosevelt legislation.

Even when the Senate overrode FDR's tax veto and "Dear Alben" Barkley made his bitter speech of denunciation, Senator Glass called the White House to say that the veto was right. The personal letter which Roosevelt sent him in reply is a matter of record.

GLASS STATEMENT WITHHELD

At that time, it was reported that the Senator planned to announce for a fourth term, despite the fact that the convention was called to boost Senator Harry Byrd. So Powell Glass in Lynchburg served warning on Rixey Smith, his father's secretary in Washington, that if any pro-Roosevelt statement was made, he would declare the Senator too ill to make such a statement. In order to avoid family embarrassment, Mrs. Glass and Rixey Smith withheld the statement.

But last week, when Justice Byrnes let drop the fact that Senator Glass had telephoned congratulating him on his speech and supporting the fourth term, Powell Glass finally carried out his threat. Declaring his father's health such that the Senator himself could not talk to Byrnes, Powell virtually called Byrnes a liar, and brought the Glass family feud right out into the open.

STILWELL'S TROUBLES IN INDIA

Inside story of General Stilwell's problems in India has just come to light in a hitherto unpublished report written by John P. Davies, State Department adviser on General Stilwell's staff.

In addition to his Chinese troubles, Stilwell's biggest job was operating against the Japs in Burma. Here he largely used Indian troops, which, according to the secret report made by Ambassador William Phillips to Roosevelt, would not resist the Japs and were largely mercenaries. Phillips reported to FDR that the Indian Army would not fight until India was given a promise of independence. (Phillips was subsequently recalled from London after this leaked out.)

Mr. Davies' report to Stilwell is even more detailed and revealing. Stilwell's

DIET AND HEALTH

A Health Check-Up

How It Should Guide Food Habits

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

WE ARE inclined to think when the subject of an annual physical examination comes up that it should consist of the examining doctor's listening to the heart and lungs, taking the blood pressure, weighing the subject, examining the urine and blood, and looking at the teeth, etc. But this sort of examination gives only the results, and the gross results at that, of what has happened to the examiner as the result of the toll of the years and his habits.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The examiner can't do anything about the toll of the years, but certainly part of his duties consists of sitting down and reviewing the subject's daily habits and giving him some advice about how to improve them. Especially food habits. This is really an annual health audit.

The result of such a sort of audit as it affected food habits has been reported by two Philadelphia investigators, Dr. Howard T. Kelly and Miss Myrtle Sheppard, on 85 subjects. The subjects were asked to keep a record of exactly what they ate for a week at two different periods. Then the examiners went over the diets in a cool scientific way pointing out where there was deficiency and where excess and giving advice for correction. Then a few weeks later the subject returned and reported how he or she was getting along on the diet with the suggested corrections.

Many Eating Correctly

About fifty per cent of the patients were already eating properly. To all intents and purposes, allowing for human nature and life in general, and likes and dislikes and restrictions imposed by the pocket book, they were eating an almost ideal diet. This is a pretty good record.

Of course there is no such thing as an ideal diet, the dietary yardstick of the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council to the contrary notwithstanding. Man is an adaptable animal. He can survive on quite a variety of diets and remain healthy, the comparative examples of the Eskimo and the South Sea Islander and the Chinese being cases in evidence. It would be a pretty gosh awful world if everybody ate exactly the same right mathematical thing three times a day all over the world. The fact that about 50 per cent of these people ate about the right food is an indication of my contention that the reports that 95 million Americans are not eating properly are grossly exaggerated.

After consultation about improvements in their diet, all but eight of the subjects turned in reports which indicated that they were getting closer to an ideal diet.

Items in Diets

I cannot take up the items on the list, but will mention a few. About 40 per cent of the subjects were not getting enough protein per day, as shown in the low consumption of meat, eggs and milk. In calculating my own diet about a year ago I was surprised to find that I was just getting about, or a little less than, the right amount of protein—surprised because I considered myself a pretty good meat and egg eater. Meat is one of the "emotional" foods. People avoid meat because they have been told it is bad for the kidneys, or some other myth. The reasons given for not eating it by some of the low protein users were that it is hard to digest, or that it is constipating, or fattening.

Interesting that very few were taking an excess of calories per day—only two out of 85. One would have thought that with all the hullabaloo about reducing diets in this country half of us were eating too much. Nearly 80 per cent of the subjects in fact were eating too little—they had a caloric deficiency.

About 20 per cent ate between meals, and about 50 per cent had an unequal distribution of calories among the meals. But I can't say I think either of those are very terrible crimes.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

"That's enough, Mrs. Chivery," boomed Nugent. But Soper's voice rose over Nugent's. "She's perfectly right," he said. "I've thought so from the very first. She's perfectly right, Nugent; there's no other real explanation. I've been patient, I've covered every possible line of inquiry. But that's enough . . ." He got up and looked at Drue, his little eyes bright and accusing. "She did it. She intended to kill him with the revolver. Then he had a heart attack and this way was easier for her. She hid his medicine; pretended to him it was gone; told him she'd save him. And then she killed him. Arrest Drue Cable now, Lieutenant. We'll get a grand jury indictment for murder in the first degree."

Nicky looked at his fingernails. "Well," he said softly into the sudden silence, "I may as well tell you, then. Drue was with Conrad in the library. I saw her. And I heard her say, 'I've got your revolver.' They had a terrific row."

Drue rose automatically, but she didn't speak. I was close beside her. Alexia said something low to Nicky. Maud looked triumphant; Peter started for the door as if to tell Craig and then as quickly came back into the room again.

District Attorney Soper said loudly that he was right, he'd known it from the first, but Nicky ought to have told it earlier.

I believe I said loudly, too, a number of times that Drue wouldn't talk without a lawyer. I couldn't think of anything else to say. Then Nugent's voice cracked like a whip, so viciously that it brought us all up short.

"Do you mean she had the revolver with her? In her hand?" he asked Nicky.

"Oh, no," answered Nicky. "I would have seen it."

"Then she wasn't actually threatening him with it?"

"I can't say about that," said Nicky airily.

"And what did you do then?"

"After I saw her go into the library?" Nicky's tone was very nonchalant. "I thought from the sound of Conrad's voice that she—well, might need somebody to back her up. But she seemed able to take care of herself, so I went upstairs. I'd just got to sleep when something fell—I don't know what—and they said Conrad was dead."

"What else did you hear?" demanded Soper quickly. "What did Brent say when she told him she had his revolver? Did he call for help? You must have heard what else they said!"

Nicky paused, looked at his fingernails, thought for a moment and said, "N-no, no, I'm afraid not."

"But if you heard their voices..." began Soper, and Nugent said abruptly, "You'll swear to all this, Mr. Senour?"

And Nicky said he wouldn't.

It was an inexplicable and sudden volte face to which he clung. "I can't swear to anything and I won't. I've only said that Drue came downstairs while Conrad was in the library."

Soper was furious. "You said they had a row. You said you saw her in the library with him just before he died. You said she threatened him with his own revolver!"

"I won't swear to anything," persisted Nicky, ignoring Alexia's frown and Maud's angry eyes.

"You don't have to," shouted Soper. "Every word you've said has been taken down in shorthand. Perfectly openly; you were all aware of it." One of the troopers in the corner, scribbled that, too, in his shorthand tablet.

But Nicky shook his head. "You'll never get me to sign it or to admit anything of the kind on the witness stand. I won't be the one to bring evidence like that against anybody—in court."

Alexia was biting her full underlip with sharp white teeth, her eyes ominously fixed on Nicky. Maud made an angry little exclamation and must have vanished about then, silently, for when next I looked for her she was gone.

Soper announced angrily that Nicky would be a witness; he couldn't help himself; he, Soper, would see to that.

Lieutenant Nugent said suddenly, "We'll question Miss Cable alone. Right, Soper?"

So the others—Alexia, Nicky, Peter and Beevens—were obliged to leave, and did so rather reluctantly, I thought. Nugent closed the door after them briskly, and Soper looked at me.

"Well?" he said sharply, "are you staying here?"

"I am," I declared firmly.

"Oh, let her stay," suggested Nugent. The District Attorney shrugged and Drue, standing very slim and erect beside the tall armchair, her gray eyes level and clear, said, "I didn't murder him."

"You were with him," accused Soper. "You had a motive...." He began his attack, but Nugent's voice cut sharply into the bluster: "Miss Cable, will you make a statement of exactly what you did do?"

"I think she ought to have a lawyer," I asserted again. "You can refuse to talk, Drue."

"I'll tell," she said. "I'll tell as much as I can." I held my breath again and tried to think of ways to stop her if she said too much.

"I was in the library as Nicky says," Drue began. "I did want to talk to Mr. Brent. So I waited until he returned from his walk, then I came to the library. We talked for some time. He had a heart attack then and . . ."

She faltered, and I was sure she was going to tell about the hypodermic. I rustled warningly. Her hand went up to her throat, as if to stop the words on her lips. "And—he died," she said. "If such a large amount of digitalis was found, I don't know how he got it."

District Attorney Soper burst into question again. "But this revolver, Miss Cable. You had a revolver. Why?"

She turned to face him. "I found that revolver in the garden," she said steadily, "yesterday afternoon."

"G—garden," stressed the District Attorney.

"Where—where Craig was shot. It was hidden and I found it. In the burlap wrapping around one of the rose shrubs."

Nugent's eyes had an odd expression. "Why did you look for it, Miss Cable? Why did you bring it to your room?"

She turned back to him; there was less defiance in her manner when she spoke to the state troop lieutenant, more confidence—which might be her undoing. Soper was ready to pounce upon any unguarded admission.

Drue answered, "Because I didn't believe the story of an accident. I went to the garden just to have a look at the place where my"—she corrected herself quickly—"where Craig had been shot. I searched it and I found the gun. That's all. I brought it to my room because I intended to show it to Craig when he was better."

"Why?" queried Nugent.

"Because it proved someone shot at him."

"He says it was accident," said Nugent, watching her closely. "He ought to know."

"I wanted him to have that revolver."

"You're saying that his accident was actually an attempted murder?" cried District Attorney Soper.

Again she whirled around to face him, her chin high, her voice steady. "He wouldn't have been cleaning a gun in the garden at eleven o'clock at night!"

"Did you know that the revolver belonged to Conrad Brent?"

"I wasn't sure."

"Did he admit it belonged to him when you took it to the library?"

"Yes. He recognized it and asked where I'd found it."

"See here, Miss Cable," said Soper with a crafty look, "did you accuse him of trying to kill his son?"

"No. Certainly not."

"Why did you give him the revolver?"

"Because I wanted him to know of it, of course."

"Why?" persisted Soper.

"Naturally because something ought to be done about it. It proved Craig didn't shoot himself. He wouldn't have hidden it."

"Exactly what did Mr. Brent, Senior, say?"

Drue flushed. "He said I couldn't have found the revolver there. He said I was—was trying to make trouble."

"And you . . ."

"I saw then that he was ill. I told him he'd better lie down. I started to leave but he—he asked me to stay with him. And then he got worse. And—and died."

Words of Wisdom

Nothing is more simple than greatness; indeed, to be simple is to be great.—Emerson.

Hints on Etiquette

Don't make clever remarks if they make you inconsiderate of anyone present.

Today's Horoscope

You are determined, discreet and conservative. Your tastes are fastidious, and you like the comfort and ease of luxurious surroundings. You are an ardent lover, have musical ability, are shrewd and resourceful, and few people can get the better of you. Business prospers in your next year. Elders promise gain. This period favors property, scientific research and intellectual activities generally. Curb your tendency to over-criticism. Today's child will enjoy more than average success and popularity, but will need to curb extravagance and love of ostentation.

One-Minute Test Answers

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, November 8

ACCORDING to the lunar transits for this day the emphasis may be concentrated on personal, social, domestic and affectional matters, although there is much promise for all business affairs relating to these aspects of life, as well as all artistic, cultural and romantic aspirations. There is a sign of prosperity, peace, happiness and perhaps a lively celebration of these in which personal magnetism, prestige and glamour may be conspicuous and influential. Courtships, marriages and other domestic festivities are in order.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of prosperity, happiness, peace and general well being, with suitable festivities to signalize such romantic, domestic, cultural and gratifying occasions. There should be enhanced glamor and personal magnetism, in which beauty, idealism and notable good fortune are emphasized. These should not be negated by extravagance, over acting, or by certain treacherous agreements or connivances.

A child born on this day should have an artistic or romantic temperament, with much personal charm, which it may use to its intriguing alliances.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

SOUCES OF KNOWLEDGE

WHEN THE opponents are indulging in psychic bidding, to fool your side out of getting into the best contract, there are several guides to the true facts. First, if too much strength has been shown around the table, more strength than the deck of cards contains—considering what you have yourself—you know somebody is lying. Who is it? If you are vulnerable and they are not, that is one indication. If they opened third hand, that is another. If your partner is habitually conservative and sound, that is still another. Expert bidders consider all of these carefully.

	♠ J 9 6 5 3 ♥ Q 10 8 4 2 ♦ 10 9 7 ♣ None
♠ A 8 4 ♥ 9 7 ♦ 8 3 ♣ A J 10 6 3 2	N W E S	♠ 10 2 ♥ A K J 3 ♦ A K 4 2 ♣ K 9 5
	♠ K Q 7 ♥ 6 5 ♦ Q J 6 5 ♣ Q 8 7 4

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl
1 NT	2 ♣	2 ♥	3 ♦
Pass	4 ♣	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♥	Pass	6 ♣

This was a case of two top-ranking pairs competing against each other in a rubber game, for keeps. West was a player noted for his consistency and conservatism and for not shading any kind of a bid except in an extremity. The reputation he had with East proved an important factor late in the bidding.

The first clue to East on the psyching of his opponents came when West showed enough strength to make a free bid at the height of two over South's 1-No Trump. When East then showed willingness to lift the bidding to three over North's 2-Hearts, he told West that his double was thoroughly sound. West's taking the bidding then voluntarily to the four level in clubs told East all the rest he wanted to know, excepting the ace situation. To find out then how many aces West had, he resorted to the Blackwood convention.

Against such opponents, the psyching tactics of North and South proved futile. They were shown up. West made the slam contract by playing the clubs right, after the spade 5 lead, and finessing hearts successfully, which enabled him to toss a spade loser on the third heart. Thus he limited his loss to a single trick in spades.

What should foresight cause South to do, in contrast to hindsight, in playing for 5-Diamonds on this deal after the club Q is led?

Columnist Makes a Plea: Votes for District Folk

Sees No Reason Ballot Denied Washingtonians

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

● WASHINGTON—This is a subject into which I have not before pounded a typewriter. But here goes—

I resent not being able to vote simply because I am a resident of the District of Columbia.

When I consider what is happening in countries whose governments deny their people the right of suffrage, I feel intensely that I personally want to prove to myself that I live in a nation whose people have the privilege of deciding on their form of government and on their administrators.

Is This Really Democracy?

More than ever before does it seem important to me to thus show myself that I am a citizen of a free country. Yet on the day when millions of Americans vote I must sit dumbly at home waiting for news on how other people have cast their ballots.

It is particularly annoying that the only reason I am prevented from voting is because I live in the District of Columbia which paradoxically under the circumstances is the center of the government which won't let me vote.

If I had a residence in a state which permitted "absentee ballots" I should continue to resent the "no voting" rule in the capital of the most important nation on earth.

How can we be expected to produce here anything but words? Suffrage being denied us, we must become gossips and intrigantes.

And another point—the most important—I've not yet heard one good reason why citizens of the United States living in the District of Columbia should be denied the right to vote.

William Howard Taft in a capital centenary speech said the real reason the seat of the young republic had been moved from Philadelphia to the swamps of the Potomac was because when one important piece of legislation was being debated at the Congress in Philadelphia, members of Congress were waylaid and even beaten up with clubs in an effort to influence their voting.

A particularly bad episode of this sort decided the government heads to move the capital to the flats into which we now have sunk our citizenship "where there would be no chance of outside influence and where we could keep the population from itself voting."

● FROM A RED CROSS GIRL SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE: "I have gone through cities only a few days after the infantry had passed through and I have visited places completely by-passed by the enemy. A day spent at Mont St. Michel eating the famous omelettes and climbing to the top of the cathedral spire . . . the bright sun, the wind and the occan made me feel more like a tourist than an RC Doughgirl.

"The people living in Mont St. Michel show no signs of having been 'occupied.'

"We came upon a horrible situation in a really 'occupied' town yesterday. A boy had been pitching hay in the field and was blown up by a concealed land mine—a German booby trap. There was no undertaker but a nun who has been preparing the people for burial. It is hard for me to understand the sort of Catholic resignation of some of these French to the fact that you cannot expect happiness on this earth and so make the best of what you've got.

"There, for example, is Madame Blanchemain, our cook. Old and fat, not very clean but with a devilish gleam in her eye. When I call for the people in the morning the three young boys who are always my passengers grab the back seat so there is no room for Madame B. Undaunted, she climbs in and plunks her whole weight down on top of the boys, paying no attention to their squeals.

A House Wrecked By War

"She took me to her poor little house today. A shell had exploded in it and it was a shambles. She showed me her little aluminum cook pot with the shrapnel holes in it and her linen torn to shreds. Wept when she talked, but next she offered me cider. Then sent me home with my arms full of flowers and baskets of eggs.

"We can't decide where she sleeps unless it is in her chicken coop. Yet she is not unhappy. Jokes all day with the boys and throws doughnut dough at them. Tomorrow we are going to drive to Bayeux to pick up her 23-year-old daughter who was 'requisitioned' by the Germans before the invasion and who has just been discovered."

TIGERS WINDING UP FOOTBALL DRILLS FOR 1944

Dave Gillis Leaves For Military Service; Final Tiger Game Friday

Wednesday was the day after election for most Circleville residents but for the Circleville high school Tigers it was a day of work.

The Tigers were to go through their last hard football drill of the 1944 season as they prepared for their last game, Friday night at Washington C. H. Scrimmage was the order of the day for Wednesday with a light drill Thursday to finish up work.

Wednesday also marked the departure of Regular End Dave Gillis. Gillis filled the entire Pickaway county colored Selective Service call for the month of November when he reported for induction Wednesday morning.

The junior end, who has been one of the big reasons for the success of the Tigers on the gridiron this Fall, played his last game last week against Grove City.

The Tigers are the big favorites in the game Friday night but Coach Roy Black is worrying about overconfidence. The Blue Lions have yet to win a game in the South Central Ohio league this season, but he points out that could be a reason why they would like to upset the Tigers Friday night.

A victory in the game Friday would give Circleville second place in the SCO championship race, already won by Greenfield, which handed the local eleven its only defeat of the season.

ARMY LINE MAY DECIDE CONTEST

Irish May Lose To Both Service Teams For First Time

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—In running wild against fair to middlin' opponents this season Army indicated very strongly that it possesses a good, tough, rugged and alert line. If its ability hasn't been overestimated the Cadets should remain undefeated against Notre Dame on Saturday at Yankee stadium. There is nothing unusual about a situation in which the line is thus regarded as the key to touchdowns, except that in this particular case the Army forwards are brought more prominently into the picture by virtue of what Navy did to Notre Dame last Saturday.

The Irish had been having pretty much their own way all season until they ran into forwards that opened up great gaping holes on the offense and stopped the Irish running game as cold as a deceased fish on the defense. The Navy line stole the show.

The Army line doesn't figure to be quite as tough as Navy's mature and unshakeable forwards, but generally is given an edge over Notre Dame by observers who have followed them both. Goach Red Blaik of Army is pinning all his hopes on the chance that his line is not far behind Navy's.

He points out, however, the all-important facts that this Navy line is the same one that played last year, thus is mature and seasoned, while Army has only one hold-over up front, the rest being second stringers of 1943.

If Notre Dame beats Army to the surprise of everybody, except possibly Notre Dame, you can attribute it to Army weaknesses up front that weren't apparent in the games to date.

The Irish have dropped a scattered few games to the service teams in the past—a total of so few that it looks actually like poor rivalry—but never in any one season have the Irish bit the dirt against both of those elevens. Everybody seems insistent that this will be the year.

While awaiting this striking eventuality, New York has gone a little daft on the subject of the Army-Notre Dame game. It always has been a mild form of local delirium, but this year any man who shows a pair of tickets to the engagement is taking his life in his hands.

There will be about 80,000 on the premises and twice that many more either trying to get in or off somewhere listening to it and cursing the fates that deprive them of witnessing one of football's most colorful extravaganzas.

At a time when interest is at its height and money plentiful Army officials found it necessary to limit public distribution of tickets so as to accomodate service people. The tickets have been handed out most carefully in an attempt to keep them out of the hands of speculators and other citizens who see a chance to pick up some quick and easy money.

SECRET PLANE FUEL

AIR SERVICE COMMAND—England—Use of a secret fuel component which adds 10-miles-per-hour to the speed of Allied fighter planes was revealed today by Col. B. F. Johnson, chief of the Air Service Command Petroleum Board in Britain. The component, in use for the last five months, is the result of long experimentation to enrich the gasoline mixture without damaging aircraft engines.

RISE STEVENS GUEST

Rise Stevens, Metropolitan Opera star, will be Bing Crosby's first guest since his return to his Thursday night program. Crosby and Miss Stevens will do songs from "Going My Way." Eugenie Baird, former Casa Loma band vocalist, replaces Marilyn Maxwell on the Thursday program and the Charioteers return.

YOU WERE WONDERFUL

Murders, spies and secret messages conveyed by means of music add up to an exciting story, titled "You Were Wonderful" and starring Lena Horne, on "Suspense," Thursday. Laid in glamourous South America, the story deals with a visiting night club entertainer from the United States, who takes over a featured spot in a club after the regular singer has been mysteriously murdered. She becomes involved with a spy ring working against her country, and sets in motion an escape plan which leads to many complexities.

HAINES SINGS "TOGETHER"

Connie Haynes sings the popular "Together," and Freddie Rich's orchestra goes Latin with "Tico Tico," while Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are catching their breath between gags on their comedy shot Thursday. Costello offers a new set of post-war plans, in which confusion is paramount.

FUN FOR MILLIONS

Jimmy Durante says the only bright spot in Garry Moore's life is on the seat of his pants. Garry just gives Jimmy the geological survey—the stony stare. In any event, despite barbs, they will be together again when Durante analyzes the election for Moore Friday. Musical interludes will be by Georgia Gibbs, singer, and Roy Bargy's orchestra.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

Morton Bowe, the Metropolitan Opera tenor, who has made several guest appearances this season with Wilfrid Pelletier's orchestra on "World of Song," has been selected the co-star with Marion Claire, the soprano, when "The Chicago Theatre of the Air" starts its fifth season of opera. The vehicle will be "The Great Waltz."

Charles Paul, "Mr. and Mrs. North" maestro, is slated to conduct the music for a series of film shorts about the FBI.

Connie Haynes, Abbott and Costello airshow canary, cut a "Command Performance" record and another "Mail Call" platter this week. One of her numbers was "Grey Morning," by Composer-Soldier Richard L. Hampton, now serving as a sergeant overseas. The tune will be in the music stores soon.

Title of radio's youngest comedienne was won hands down by Norma Nielsson, who made her debut on a recent George Burns and Gracie Allen program. Norma is six years old and so sensational at "reading" lines that the stars have planned to make her a regular cast member in the troupe that includes Sara Algood, Bill Goodwin and Mel Blanc.

Charlie Cantor, who plays Finnegan on "Duffy's Tavern," is Hollywood's latest glamour boy. His part in the film version of the show was increased to include more lines in the immortal dopey Finnegan style of delivery when movie executives glimpsed the daily rushes and pronounced Cantor "a new find!"

Contrasting guest stars will visit Burns and Allen when the funsters broadcast from Philadelphia Tuesday, Nov. 28 on behalf of the War Loan Drive. Appearing with them will be Jose Iturbi, the brilliant pianist and conductor, and Andy Russell, swoon singer.

You can expect Dunninger, the Mental Marvel, to bob up anywhere on the dial these days in addition to his regular Wednesday night appearances. The Master Mentalist, making personal appearances on the west coast, is being sought for numerous guest shots. These he'll have to fit into his busy schedule, like his stint with Jack Benny Sunday night.

Voters of Circleville Not Yet Through With Elections

WATER PLANT DECISION TO BE REACHED DEC. 5

Further Balloting Plans Made At Session Of City Council

Circleville voters have not finished voting for the year of 1944.

December 5, less than a month after Tuesday's election, residents of the city will vote on the purchase of a municipal water plant at a special election.

Further plans for the special election were made at Tuesday night's meeting of city council. An ordinance to appropriate funds to cover the cost of mailing information to voters was passed under suspension of rules and members discussed plans for presenting a campaign for the issue.

Only one councilman, Troy White, was absent from the election night meeting of council. Clerk Fred Nicholas missed the meeting and his place was taken by Solicitor Joseph Adkins.

Passed unanimously by the six members present was an ordinance appropriating $40 to cover the cost of printing, postage and labor in connection with the mailing to all city residents who voted at the 1943 November election copies of the ordinance for condemnation of the Ohio Water Service company plant and sample ballots of the issue.

Also passed under suspension of rules was an ordinance appropriating $75 to cover the cost of diphtheria and smallpox vaccines needed by the city health department.

Councilman Boyd Horn, chairman of the claims committee, reported his committee favored payment of damages for a washing machine belonging to Mrs. Kenneth Baldwin, Town street, damaged when a sanitary sewer back into the basement of her home.

Councilman John Reed recommended a bonus of $5 a month be given regular police and firemen next year, if possible.

Members also heard the mayor's report and Berger hospital report for the month of October.
